

HEADLINES

ESKIMO COUPLE FINED FOR HEATING THINGS UP IN PUBLIC

In Alaska yesterday, a lesbian Eskimo couple was fined for public indecency after local authorities received complaints from neighbors regarding their displays of affection. While the middle-aged couple admits to only kissing on their own property, the neighbors suggest that the two were rubbing a lot more than just their noses together.

A ROYAL PAIN FOR ZSA ZSA'S PRINCE

On Tuesday December 21st, Zsa Zsa Gabor's husband, Prince Frederic Von Anhalt, had accidentally glued his right eye shut when he mistakenly grabbed his wife's nail glue instead of his eye drops, forcing him now to wear a patch over the injured eye for the next two weeks. Sources say that the Prince looks forward to both a full recovery and seeing his wife half as often.

FINAL CONSTRUCTION OF ST. GENESIUS SCHOOL WILL RESURRECT THIS SPRING

The final construction for the St. Genesius School, Pennsylvania's first all boys catholic middle school for the performing arts, will be postponing their final construction until late spring. Though members of the parish community are saddened over the news, the priests assure the public that they will be taking a hands on approach to get things erected for these boys as soon as possible,